The worshippers sitting below him recalled later that his face shone with a light never noticed before as he recited the familiar words. He had about half finished the reading when he wouldenly sat un and smiled a smile that suddenly sat up and smiled a smile that none who saw will ever forget. Then he slipped from his seat and crumpled up on the floor. His heart had stopped bent-ing, and in the twinkling of an eye he

WOMAN PERISHES

It was a death which the old clergyman — he was 77 years old in July last—had often said he hoped would be his privilege.

"I don't want to be refered," he recently confided to friends. "I wish—I must—die in harness."

Before the first bell tolled for the morning service the old clergyman complained of not feeling as well as usual, and members of his family urged him to remain at home.

With friends in the town. A day went by and there was still no news from her.

Yesterday when George Singer was skirting the river bank he stumbled over the body of the missing woman. She had frozen to death in the storm and in the snow. In some woods near by stood the horse, nearly exhausted, and the wagon was still attached to the animal. The Christmas presents were still in the body of the wagon.

Thive my work to do and must go: Is my duty," he replied with a smile. He left the rectory at 205 East North COMMUNITY DRIVE

Marmaduke R. Clark, who is the personal representative of Col. Kingsbury at the Knights of Columbus hall, which is the general clearing house for the recruits on their way to the fort, stated to find that out of the 6.500 men only four have reported ill.

"There has not been a single case of pneumonia," said Mr. Clark; "several have bad colds, while two others have frostbitten hands or feet. I think this is a fine condition of affairs, considering the severe winter weather we are experiencing."
